Correction

We wish to inform your readers of an error in our paper, "Social Processes and Psychiatric Symptom Pattern Change: Wallace Revisited" [Vol. 35, pp. 287-93]. At some point in the writing of the paper, the word "etiology" became "ideology" in the quotation of Wallace's original statement. The quotation [on p. 288] should read:

> The frequency distribution of the types of mental disorder in a given society vary from time to time, depending on changes in the frequency and intensity of operation of the various etiological factors.

We have reviewed the entire paper, and have concluded that the misquotation, though erroneous, was conceptually serendipitous, since in psychiatry etiology does follow ideology.
